About Gaynor Boileau

I am a lecturer in Counselling and Psychotherapy at Warwickshire College. I am also a clinical supervisor for individuals and groups and am in private practice in Leamington Spa working with individual clients and couples. My first training was in person-centred counselling and I now work as a cognitive behavioural therapist.

I am particularly interested in the importance of the relationship, regardless of counselling modality, and the need to risk self in relationship. This underpins my enthusiasm for working with couples in crisis.
