TIME IS THE MOST IMPORTANT RESOURCE IN MENTAL HEALTH CARE

Time is the most valuable thing we can offer people struggling with mental health problems and we have a basic human right to getting this time when needed. It's very easy to overlook this so let me give you an example of a hypothetical but typical case.

A young woman is sitting with her GP and begins to discuss the people she hears telling her to cut herself, kill herself and kill her family. She looks over her shoulder to find them and is clearly distressed, confused and upset by what's happening. She describes living alone and her family relationships seem to have come undone for, at the time, unrecognised reasons. Help is offered. The GP refers her to a community mental health team as an urgent referral given the apparent intensity of her difficulties. She is somewhat reluctant but agrees to attend the community mental health team. (1 hour including GP consultation letter writing phone calls etc).

Her initial contact is with a psychiatric registrar who details her history, family circumstances and a description of her current difficulties. (1 hour clinical interview). Her second meeting, two days later, is with a consultant psychiatrist and a clinical psychologist, who jointly review the details of the initial meeting she had with the registrar with her, and come to an initial understanding of her difficulties and develop a treatment plan (1 hour). In the interim she has also met with a psychiatric nurse who has offered to visit her in her home and does so within the first few days of her engagement with the mental health service (3 hours).....

CPD VIDEO - WORKING WITH SUICIDAL CLIENTS

On Friday 17th October 2014 The Psychologists Protection Society Trust invited Dr Eoin Galavan to speak on the topic of "Working with Suicidal Clients". The session was part of the Psychologists Protection Society's 2014 Annual General Meeting held in Dublin.

This talk will outline the Psychology of suicidality and suicidal behaviour, the Collaborative Assessment and Management of Suicidality (CAMS) model of working with suicidal clients and some of the therapeutic challenges faced by therapists, counsellors and psychologists in working with this client group. A theme of best practice and protective practice will be emphasised throughout.
