About Lesley Edelstein

After my second divorce I realised that although there is lots of help for couples who want to get their relationship back on track there are little help for those whose relationship is ending.

I began working collaboratively with family law firms to support those who need emotional mediation. Solicitors were relived to have my input as they are not trained to deal with the emotions of clients struggling with the divorce process.

I will share my enthusiasm for the work I do with couples or individuals who are about to or going through the process of divorce. I see couples who wish to communicate more effectively and co-parent without conflict.
