About Peggy Natiello

Human development consultant and author Peggy Natiello, Ph.D., worked closely with Carl Rogers from 1978-1987 on many person-centered staffs. Dr. Rogers served as her major doctoral advisor and mentored her dissertation on the nature of learning that occurs in person-centered experiences. Her doctoral and post-doctoral research and writing have addressed significant questions about the person-centered approach.

Known for her person-centered group work, Peggy is an international consultant, serves on the graduate faculty at Prescott College, and has written many articles on client-centered therapy and the person-centered approach. Her book, The Person-Centered Approach: A passionate presence, was written to clarify and demonstrate the importance of this often misunderstood and quite radical approach to psychotherapy, counseling, education, and group work.

“How did the shy Midwestern boy named Carl Rogers - physically frail, socially timid, unadventurous, brunt of his siblings' teasing - end up shaking the foundations of the field of psychology and earning a worldwide reputation? What were the qualities that enabled him to earn such fame? The intent of this chapter is to look at Carl R. Rogers the person, and to deepen our understanding of the relationship between his biography' and his theory.”
