

Why Use Fink Conversation Cards in Work with Parents – Jane Evans

Resource Guide

About Jane Evans

During my working life I have offered practical, emotional and parenting support to families who have lived with and beyond:

domestic violence and abuse drug and alcohol dependency mental and physical illness disability poverty homelessness asylum-related needs child protection and safeguarding needs educational welfare issues

I have worked for:

North Wiltshire Education Authority
NSPCC
Barnardo's
Bath & North East Somerset children & families service Survive
Springboard Opportunity pre-school Wiltshire fostering service

In addition, I have been a registered childminder, a volunteer mentor for the Wiltshire youth offending team and a volunteer at a Barnardo's children's centre.

Since becoming self-employed, I have been able to bring all of my experience together to develop a brain, attachment and trauma-informed approach to raising children, which I call Tuning In. I deliver this as training to professionals, as a bespoke parenting/caring course and on a one-to-one basis.

Fink Cards

A good conversation can solve a community's problems, nurture the next generation and have an impact on society.

Fink's mission is to start those conversations. We want to enable better conversations across generations for individuals, families, schools, organisations and communities.

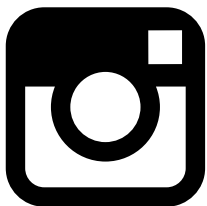

Fink was founded by Lisa Warner, mum of four, to make products that get people talking. <http://finkcards.com/>
