About RORY LEES-OAKES

I am counselling tutor and practicing school counsellor based at the Higher Education Faculty of Warrington Collegiate, a college in the North West of England. I graduated in 2004, and hold post graduate certificates in supervision, education, child and adolescent therapy.

After qualifying, I stayed on at my counselling placement which became Tameside, Oldham and Glossop Mind as a counsellor, eventually becoming (in a voluntary capacity) chair and director of the organisation. My paid work was quite varied, I spent a year as a floating support worker for a mental health charity supporting people in their homes, followed by five years working part time as a support worker for Nacro, an organisation which helps ex offenders re integrate in to society. During this time, I taught Counselling at Tameside College; in 2007, I accepted a part time position at Warrington Collegiate as course leader for the Counselling provision and becoming full time in 2009 (I qualified as a teacher in 2008).

Event Details

The new BACP ethical framework asks us to use an ethical problem solving matrix as part of defensible decision making. In this event, Rory Lees-oakes will discuss both the philosophical underpinnings of counselling ethics as well as describing a process to inform defensible decision making.

1st Learning Objective:

Describe the two philosophical positions which underpin counselling ethics.

2nd Learning Objective:

Discuss action planning using an ethical problem solving model.

Self-Actualisation – Solving Ethical Problems – Seven Stages Of Process in Practice 2 – Difference between Counselling and Psychotherapy

In episode 12 of the Counselling Tutor Podcast, Rory Lees-Oakes and Ken Kelly look at Maslow's hierarchy of needs. Rory presents an approach to solving ethical problems, while Ken continues his application of Carl Rogers' seven stages of process to counselling practice. Finally, 'Ask Ken and Rory' asks: what are the differences, if any, between counselling and psychotherapy?
